ADJUDICATION OF PREMIUMS.

SEVERAL years since we offered three premiums to writers in a volume of the Panoplist; and the offer was continued, by implication, to writers in three succeeding volumes. These premiums were adjudged to writers in the tenth and eleventh volumes, and the adjudications were published, immediately after they were made. In reference to the two later volumes, the adjudication has been delayed till quite recently, because we could not find three gentlemen, of suitable qualifications, at leisure to look over the volumes and decide.

The conditions were, that pieces written by the Editor, or either of the judges, were not to be candidates for the premiums; and that the only rule of judging should be, the tendency of the pieces to do good.

Under these restrictions, the premiums to writers in the twelfth volume were as follows:

The premium of twenty-five dollars to the best prose composition was adjudged to the writer of the Essay, which was published in our numbers for May and June 1816, On the manner in which the Scriptures are to be understood; the premium of fifteen dollars for the best piece of poetry, to the writer of The Lord's Day Morning, in the number for June; and that of ten dollars, for the second best prose composition, to the writer of the Essays on the Sabbath, in the numbers for January and March.

The writer of the first of these pieces was the late lamented Dr. DWIGHT; of the poetry, the Rev. WILLIAM JENKS, of Boston; and of the other prose composition, the Rev. HEMAN HUMPHREY of Pittsfield.

To the writers in the thirteenth volume, the premiums were awarded as follows:

That of twenty-five dollars to the writer of the series of papers, six in number, entitled, Theological Remarks; that of fifteen dollars to the writer of Tears of Penitence, which was published in the number for June 1817; and that of ten dollars, to the writer of Familiar Sermons.

We are not sufficiently certain who the writer of Theological Remarks is, to mention his name in this public manner. The writer of the poetry is totally unknown to us. The Rev. WILLIAM L. STRONG, of Somers, Con. wrote the Familiar Sermons.

To the writers who are known, the premiums will be sent without application. If the others are not applied for within a year, they will be considered as relinquished.
